

TOTALLY TWEAKED!

As I am sure you can tell, the cover of The Law of Three is looking a little different these days. That's because when it went back to press for its latest reprint run, since the ISBN/EAN Barcode had to be converted to the new 13 digit standard anyway, the cover artist took the opportunity to "tweak" the colors for some of the text to make it stand out more. (One of those market research things)...But, even more important than that, he added the "turned corner" at the top. The "handwritten" text on legal pad looking paper revealed by that turned corner illusion touts the fact that TLOT was the 2003 RFT Readers Choice Award winner.

As usual, the artist, Johnathan Minton, did a bang up job, and the cover looks fabulous!

The only down note-- with costs increasing everywhere, the cover price on the new printing went from $12.95 to $14.95...But, it's still more than worth it! (IMHO, of course, I'm a little biased <Grin>)...